Single-nucleotide polymorphisms (SNPs) in the ABCB1 gene have been associated with the risk of pulmonary embolism (PE). However, conflicting results are reported in these studies, and the results are inconclusive in Asian population. To evaluate the possible associations of ABCB1 SNPs with the risk of PE in Chinese population, a case-control study was performed in 234 Chinese patients and 205 age- and sex-matched healthy controls. The rs1045642 variant was identified in the ABCB1 gene by polymerase chain reaction (PCR)-restriction fragment length polymorphism (RFLP) method. The genotypes of rs1045642 and -24C>T were significantly different between cases and controls (P=0.038 and P=0.020, respectively). Compared with homozygous wild-type genotypes, both heterozygous and homozygous variant genotypes of rs1045642 were significantly associated with a decreased risk of PE (P=0.004 and P=0.002, respectively). Stratified analysis showed that subjects with homozygous variant genotypes of rs1045642 had a reduced risk of PE (odds ratio=0.56, 95% confidence interval=0.32-0.98), compared with the homozygous wild-type genotypes. The combined effect of rs1045642 and -24C>T had no significant association with the risk of PE. Our results suggest that rs1045642 may be a protective factor for the risk of PE, whereas rs1045642 and -24C>T may have no effect on the risk of PE in Chinese
