100 MB. A: The correct answer was: B. The diagram is: Autocrine production of IL-2 by T cells is required for the optimal growth and function of antigen-specific cytotoxic T lymphocytes. Interleukin-2 (IL-2) is important for the growth and function of antigen-specific cytotoxic T lymphocytes (CTLs) and natural killer cells. In addition, production of IL-2 by T cells is critical for effective immunity, because IL-2 is required for the activation and differentiation of T cells, the generation of effector and memory T cells, the proliferation of T cells, and the generation of memory B cells and plasma cells. Thus, IL-2 is a key cytokine in the immune response. We show here that T cells produce IL-2, which acts as an autocrine factor in T cells, and thus IL-2 secreted by T cells is important for the regulation of T cell function and the maintenance of antigen-specific CTLs. Thus, in mice with IL-2-deficient CD4+ and CD8+ T cells, CD4+ T cells failed to proliferate in response to antigenic challenge in vivo and failed to generate effector and memory cells, which were likely to be caused by a defect in the differentiation of naive CD4+ T cells. In addition, CD8+ T cells with IL-2-deficient CD8alpha+ T cells failed to develop effector and memory cells. A [d6p]-1,1,4,4-tetraaza-3-oxopentanal as a versatile building block for the synthesis of novel nitrilimine derivatives. A [d6p]-1,1,4,4-tetraaza-3-oxopentanal has been prepared in one step by the reaction of tetraamine 1 with tri-tert-butyl nitrilimine. The introduction of nitrogen-nitrogen bonds in the molecule is evidenced by various  $^1\text{H}$  NMR experiments and the X-ray crystal structure of the compound. The thermal decomposition of the nitrilimine was investigated by thermogravimetric analysis and differential thermal analysis.[Morphological analysis of dermatophytoses in newborns].
