Valley, AZ, May 28, 2014 -- TREVENAC Limited, manufacturer of Tap Plastics, has added a new adhesive to its assortment of thermoplastics and polyolefins, providing engineered options to customers who need the best in adhesive choice. Heracratex® TLP-210C or HTX-210C is a two-component self-curing engineering grade acrylic elastomer designed for use in corrosion-resistant plumbing applications. Its two-component system ensures that the adhesive can be mixed immediately before application and applied over a short time to significantly reduce pot life issues. "When we added HTX-210C to our product line, we knew we had found a superior adhesive that could be used in a wide range of applications," said TREVENAC's President and CEO, Donna Smith. "It's an ideal solution for our customers who need to preserve their plumbing fixtures and tubing at the point of application. Heracratex® HTX-210C has been used for years in plumbing fixtures and our customers tell us they are pleased with the bond." The unique patented formulation of HTX-210C makes it compatible with standard heat-activated hot melt adhesives to create a non-flammable two-component cold-weld adhesive that can be mixed at the point of application and applied to fixtures, tubing and various other surfaces.
