We have developed a rapid, sensitive assay for microgram quantities of RNA. The assay is based on the use of the firefly luciferase gene as reporter gene and therefore can be performed using a convenient chemiluminescence assay, such as the "luciferin/luciferase" reaction. The assay allows the quantification of RNA in about 90 min. The limit of detection is about 0.1-0.5 ng RNA, corresponding to a quantity of the RNA as small as 1-5 x 10(-17) M (2 fmol).Fortinet expands managed SSL portfolio, highlights what's new FortiGuard Online Protection System, a managed SSL certificate program that aims to help organizations efficiently deploy secure communications, has been expanded with two new features and a new parent company. The program, which was acquired by Entrust last year, now includes three new features: • Web site policy • Domain name service (DNS) support • X.509 certificate supports Certifire, a wholly owned subsidiary of Entrust, will manage the SSL certificates. The SSL certificates, which are based on a company's domain name, are based on technology provided by CAcert, a non-profit organization that provides trustworthy identity and authentication to web users worldwide. "FortiGuard Online Protection System has been one of the most successful managed certificate programs over the past three years," said Jonathan Chou, VP of Worldwide Development and OEM Solutions for CAcert. "As we saw more and more SSL adoption, we were pleased to partner with Fortinet to extend our software products and develop the new SSL capabilities within the FortiGuard Online Protection System platform." The SSL certificates are based on CAcert's open-source protocol. CAcert is the global leader in digital certificate authority services.
