Act of War: Red Planet Act of War: Red Planet (stylized as Act of War - RED PLANET) is a real-time strategy game set on Mars. Act of War is developed by Volition (co-developer of Volition: Fight for San Francisco) and is distributed by Koch Media. Plot In 2048, the U.S. Army begins testing its first Mars rover, the M4C, built by Raytheon and Boeing. However, when the rover mysteriously disappears, a small team of CIA agents and Air

Force soldiers must race against time to find it before it falls into the hands of the Russian Federation. Gameplay The game features heavy emphasis on combat mechanics. Unlike most games in the real-time strategy genre, it does not rely on building and managing resources. Instead, a player must develop a huge army of troops, bases and equipment to combat enemy forces. It is the first game by Volition to allow two teams to play the game simultaneously, in addition to two players. Combat is a combination of real-time strategy and action games, with infantry units engaging in ground combat, as well as air, naval, and special operations units engaging in air-to-air, air-to
